 Consideration should be given to increase the primary release area and allow wolves to establish viable territories beyond the BRWRA. Secondary release of breeding pairs should be allowed in more diverse regions of

AZ, NM & CO.

More intensive non-lethal harassment should be permitted in all cases to protect domestic animals & live stock.

Comments:

Favor: expansion of recovery area into Rodas - Chahohok fire area & other Forest with abundant elk

— allow people to defend pets as well as livestock on private land (but watch out for vigilantes bringing pets to private inholdings to kill wolves)

— paying ranchers in recovery areas full market value for wolf-killed livestock. This would encourage expansion of recovery area & would be cheaper than fighting P.R. battles w/ ranchers — ~~encourage~~ leaving wolves in large experimental area unless they're causing problems

(instead of automatic

relocation to 1^o or 2^o

recovery areas)

Comments:

I support the wolf reintroduction project wholeheartedly and feel the current holes are essentially good ones. I do feel that hikers with leashed pets should be able to fend off a wolf attack using lethal means if absolutely necessary. However, the pet should be leashed for this purpose. I believe that additional release areas need to be located to allow for more releases and less pressure on existing packs. I also feel that ~~the~~ perhaps grazing allotments need to be reduced to remove the temptation of livestock as prey.

I believe that some sort of defense of pets, ie, pepper spray, should be allowed if pets are on leash while hiking
